Dear North Carolinians:

I am honored to present to you the 2004 North Carolina Department of Juvenile Justice and Delinquency Prevention Annual Report: Creating Success for Youth. I am pleased with the Department's efforts to create One North Carolina by ensuring success for the state's most at-risk youth.

The Department has made great strides in building a comprehensive juvenile justice system for North Carolina with community-oriented juvenile justice as its foundation. Through the work of the state's juvenile crime prevention councils, programs are being developed to help at-risk youth achieve success.

As the data in this report reflect, these youth present many needs and challenges. As One North Carolina, we are addressing those needs and are seen as national leaders in this effort. I continue to look to the North Carolina Department of Juvenile Justice and Delinquency Prevention in the future to develop new programming for at-risk youth, maintain public safety, establish community relationships, and continue to create success for the youth they encounter.

With kindest regards, I remain

Very truly yours,

Dear Friends of Youth:

The Department's 2004 Annual Report: Creating Success for Youth reviews a year in which we worked with communities throughout the state to create success for the most at-risk youth. Our community connections are growing, and together we will be able to achieve even more success in the future.

All 100 North Carolina counties are implementing a comprehensive juvenile justice strategy that is being touted as a national model. Through data analysis and research, the Department has built the foundation for community-oriented juvenile justice. Our state of the art information system, NC-JOIN, is able to provide the most accurate and consistent data. Through the development of monitoring and evaluation tools, we are learning what programs are working for our youth and what needs to be developed to help them achieve success. Because of our advances in data collection in 2004, we are able to make data-driven decisions that directly impact youth needs.

North Carolina's youth population continues to grow, and we continue to work diligently to serve their needs. We continue to reduce our youth development center population and are developing a plan for facility replacement in which we plan to shift our juvenile justice system from a correctional system to a holistic, therapeutic approach emphasizing treatment and education. At the core of this plan is family involvement, staffing capability, and community connectedness. We still have much left to do and will continue to need the support of your community.

Thank you for your continued support. We look forward to celebrating success in 2005.

Sincerely,

2004 ANNUAL REPORT
CREATING SUCCESS FOR YOUTH

"You may not remember me, but you changed my life."

Those are remarks that many of our 1700 Department of Juvenile Justice and Delinquency Prevention staff hear from youth they have worked with in the past.

Our juvenile court counselors work with these youth in our communities to help them find the path of success. In 2004, one of our court counselors was reminded of the success he achieved when a young man approached him at a gas station and thanked him for turning his life around. He now has a successful career and is raising a family. His story is not the only one that reminds us of the important work we do.

Our youth development center (YDC) staff who work with youth in secure facilities are reminded of the success they create when they hear about the success of a youth who is now doing well in college following her release from a YDC. Before spending time in a YDC with our staff, college never entered the youth's mind. She is now on a successful path. Other students have also followed her direction.

The youth we serve have many challenges and needs. The 2004 data reveal their many needs and give the framework for how we work to create success for these youth. We measure our success in many different ways. We are creating success for these youth by diverting them out of the court system and into community based services. We create success by finding youth a mentor. We create success by giving youth a place to go after school. We are creating success by teaching our youth to read. We are creating success for our youth by preparing them for the workforce and, in some cases, higher education. We are daily creating success for these youth no matter how big or small the accomplishment. What may seem small to some may be a huge accomplishment for one of our youth.

As the data in the 2004 report reflect, we still have much work to do in order to continue to create success. We are working to change the behavior of youth so that they are law abiding citizens. We are proud of the success accomplished in 2004 and know there are many other success stories yet to be told.

THE NORTH CAROLINA DEPARTMENT OF JUVENILE JUSTICE & DELINQUENCY PREVENTION

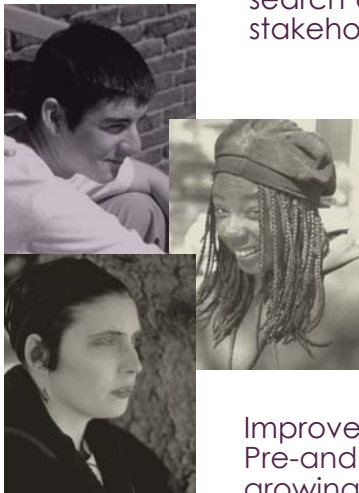

ACCOMPLISHMENTS: CREATING SUCCESS IN 2004

Working to Reduce Juvenile Crime

Adopted a comprehensive strategy with support from the State Advisory Council on Juvenile Justice and Delinquency Prevention for protecting communities from juvenile crime and for effectively intervening in the lives of youth with problem behavior.

Embarking on Future Success

Unveiled a plan to develop smaller, more therapeutic Youth Development Centers across North Carolina where youth commitments are highest. Our plan embarks on a new philosophy that blends education and treatment in a community-based setting. The Department conducted research on trends and best practices and traveled the state to listen to community stakeholders to develop the facility replacement plan.

Keeping Youth Out of Court and in their Community

Diverted fifty-two percent of all youth from juvenile court with diversion plans and contracts.

Successful Reduction in YDC Commitments

Continued to reduce the state's Youth Development Center (YDC) commitment numbers. Only 473 youth were committed to the Department for treatment and education which marks an all-time low. Since 1998, there has been a 65 percent decrease in YDC commitments.

Helping All Youth Succeed in Education

Improved the reading levels of youth in our Youth Development Centers (YDCs). Pre- and post-test assessments in reading show that YDC students on average are growing two academic months for every month of school. On average, a youth who enters a YDC is four grade levels behind in reading when committed.

Raising the Bar in Department Accountability and Performance

Selected to participate in the 2004 Innovations in American Government Award-Winning Performance-based Standards (PbS) Candidacy Program to collect and analyze data in safety, education, health and mental health services, security, and justice to improve and measure the effectiveness of program design.

Using Technology to Make the Best Decisions for At-Risk Youth

Assembled the first full year of in-depth data through NC-JOIN, enabling the Department to better meet the needs of youth and enhance program planning and implementation.

Improving State Collaboration to Create Success for All Youth

Increased interagency collaboration to serve youth with co-occurring mental health and substance abuse disorders who have committed crimes. The Department, along with representatives from NC Health and Human Services, the courts, parent advocates and community providers, was selected as one of eight jurisdictions to participate in a National Policy Academy on this topic.

Addressing Disproportionate Minority Contact

Began implementation of a Department plan to reduce disproportionate minority contact by holding awareness sessions and work groups involving over 100 staff.

Keeping Youth Safe in School

Continued the Department's school safety efforts through its "What We Want to Be is Bully Free" campaign. Anti-bullying posters were displayed in every North Carolina public school, and Center for Prevention of School Violence staff conducted 539 workshops, community awareness sessions, staff development seminars, and other technical assistance activities in local communities across the state.

Creating Success by Focusing on Programming that Works to Change Behaviors

Trained Department staff, Juvenile Crime Prevention Council members and program providers on the standardized program evaluation protocol (SPEP). This protocol helps JCPCs develop best practices for juvenile justice programming to ensure youth are most appropriately served by reducing risks for the youth and community and most effectively using resources.

Working to Keep Kids in School

Received a Z. Smith Reynolds Foundation grant to assist local communities in creating, enhancing, and maintaining alternative-to-suspension programs. The Department also partnered with 15 schools with disproportionate numbers of suspensions, providing intensive technical assistance to help them overcome minority overrepresentation in suspensions and expulsions through the DisMISS (Disproportionate Minority Involvement of Suspended Students) Project.

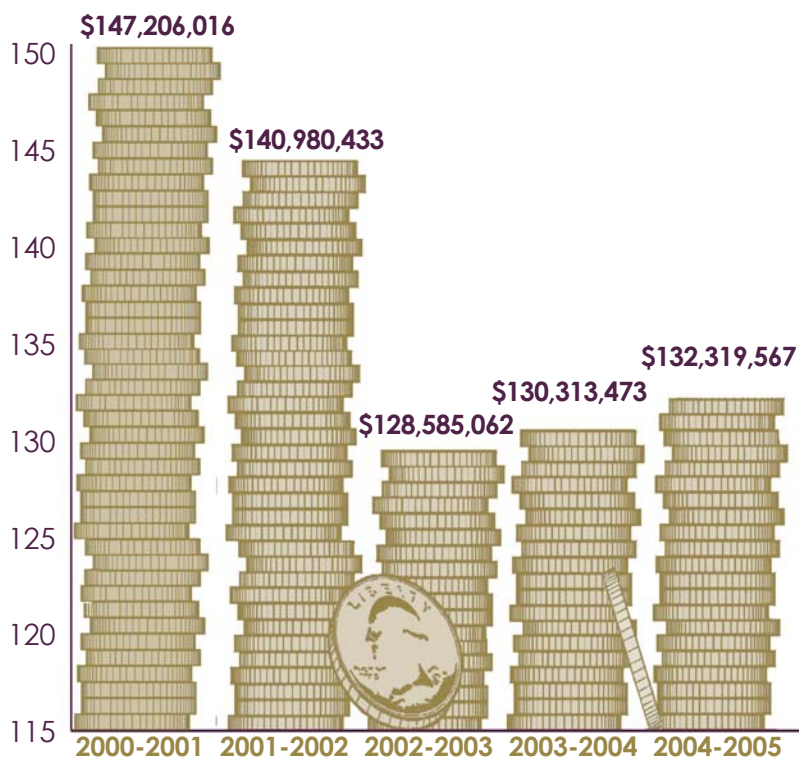

Creating Success for Each Other-Creates Success for Youth

Developed an internal creating success campaign which recognizes outstanding individuals and teams for their efforts to create success for youth.

Working together as a team, we will create success for our youth!

COMMUNITY-ORIENTED JUVENILE JUSTICE: AREA DATA

Through a partnership with 100 Juvenile Crime Prevention Councils (JCPCs), 23 million dollars is distributed throughout the state to serve at-risk youth. Each JCPC works to fund and develop effective juvenile justice and delinquency prevention programming. We help create success for at-risk youth through our community connections. Our court offices work within four areas: Eastern; Central; Piedmont; and Western. The data found on pages 14 through 21 concentrate on individual counties and areas.
